Stellian Grass.
In Sicily there is a wild grass which, when ripe at the end of summer, is gathered by the peasantry, tied in bundles and set on fire, not, however, to be consumed, but for a mere scorching. The flame flies rapidly through the light husks and beard of the plant and leaves the seeds slightly roasted, in which state they are eaten with considerable relish by numbers of the rural population.

The botanical name of this Sicilian grass is Uglopolis, or gosteyce, the Greeks having believed it to be a remedy for a disease that appears in one corner of the eye. There are three or four species growing all around the Mediterranean as well as in the islands, chiefly on the hot, dry, sandy plains near the sea. They flourish even on the scorched volcanic soils, in strange contrast to their arid and barren surroundings, showing that the vital principle in them is unusually energetic and proof against extremes of heat.

A Homely Axiom.
"Do not bite off a bigger piece than you can chew," is a homely axiom that it is safe to heed and which expresses in language more forcible perhaps than elegant a vital truth. But although we all know the misery of undertaking too much, of having more care upon us than we know how to manage, why is it that we, over and over again, place ourselves in this uncomfortable position? How easy it would be to gauge our powers and our purses at their right values and act accordingly if we only would—but it is forever the same old story.

We stupidly pile up burdens upon our shoulders that are absolutely senseless, but that after a time weigh as heavily as Shubad the Sailor's Old Man of the Sea. In nine cases out of ten people live beyond their strength and beyond their income and what a waste of vital power that means, what depression and carking care!

Mosquitoes and Sounds.

A doctor, writing from Port of Spain, Trinidad, to a medical journal, tells of his experiences with mosquitoes. He says that one of his childish amusements when playing with his companions in the early evening was to strike a note that would attract the insects. As he remembers, the most alluring sound was a continuous "oo," sung in a medium key, which was quickly changed to "ah" in a lower tone and dwelt on in the same way. The effect on the mosquitoes was magical. Their stinging would quickly increase in volume, and they would immediately attack the faces of the children, who, strange to say, enjoyed the sport. But the mosquitoes did not enjoy it long, for their love of music afforded an excellent opportunity of killing them.

He Knew Himself.

A friend once took a reformed gambler to a religious meeting. The preacher devoted a large part of his discourse to remarks reflecting upon the past life of the gambler. The man who had escorted the gambler to the meeting thought it incumbent on him to apologize for introducing him into a place where he would hear himself abused. "I didn't know that was the way this preacher was going to talk," he said, "or I wouldn't have asked you to come."

Oh, don't worry about that," was the reply.

"There never was a sermon worth a cuss that didn't hit me somewhere."

An Odd Advertisement.

The sudden popularity some years ago of Mr. Shorthouse's book, "John Inglesant," is attributed to an odd incident. "Mr. Gladstone," says the London Express, "was sitting to a photographer and holding in his hand a copy of 'John Inglesant.' The gold lettering on the cover caught the light, and the title showed clearly in the photograph. The likeness of the great statesman proved a very popular one, and its circulation broadcast over the country led to a widespread demand for the book."

Church Nods.

"Didn't the minister feel it when so many in the congregation fell asleep during the sermon?"

"Oh, no. It encouraged him to keep on."

"How so?"

"Why, he was egotistical enough to think they were nodding approval at what he said."

Fame Trout.

An English gentleman had some trout in a piece of water close to his front door. On one occasion he held a worm near the surface of the water. A large trout jumped at the worm and, seizing hold of his fingers, cut them to the bone with its teeth by its own weight.

His strenuous way.

"Sparta—Hello, Cantle! Exercising your horse this morning?"

"Cantle (mounted)—That was my intention when I started out, but it seems to me the horse has been exercising me.—Boston Transcript."

Appreciation.

"You have great admiration for your wife's judgment," said the friend.

"I have," answered Mr. Meekton. "She's the only woman who ever said 'Yes' when I proposed to her."—Washington Star.

Rather Dense.

Wigg—He's rather dense, isn't he? Wags—Yes. He wouldn't recognize the point of a joke if he sat down on it.—Philadelphia Record.

BEEDING LUNGS

Cured by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the old reliable cough cure.

Wm. H. Breder, of Christie street, New York City, writes: "I have had a cough ever since my childhood. It was so bad that blood would spurt from my nose, which would leave me weak, so that I was often compelled to leave my work. Started to take Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and before the third bottle was finished my cough was entirely gone."

Dr. John W. Bull, who discovered Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup 50 years ago, was the most successful doctor for all throat and lung diseases the world has ever known. No other doctor has ever been able to devise a better formula. There is no case of throat or lung trouble which Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will not cure.
